"TWIXT YOU AND ME."

(Della Thomson Latex.)

We have to have some things, at least, to keep our clothes in, beds to sleep on, chairs to sit on, dishes and tables to eat from. If we eliminated things entirely from our home of life, we would be no better off than our ancient ancestors. But we can learn the beauty of simplicity in things, and that is a lesson upon which we are almost universally ignorant. A dining room is a place in which to eat. The only things needed there are a table, a proper number of straight-backed chairs, a sideboard, serving table and possibly a closet or cupboard for dishes. Nothing else is needed, but, to add to our pleasure, we may have growing plants or cut flowers. Absolutely nothing more has a place in this room. If there is a mantel, let it hold a clock, a vase for flowers, possibly a rare or treasured dish, but nothing else. Photo rails are just catchers. Dishes hung about the wall add little or nothing to the beauty of the room, unless they are rare or very beautiful, and you can afford to keep some one to dust them. The house mother has too many really important things to do for her to spend her time dusting useless plates. If the dining room serves as a living room as well, then some leniency may be had in the furnishings and those things added which are necessary to the comfort of the family.

Bed rooms should have nothing whatever in them but the bed, a chair, a bureau or dressing table and whatever other furniture is absolutely needed for dressing and sleeping purposes. Any superfluous curtains, draperies, decorations or bric-a-brac are collectors of dust and germs and act as conveyances of poison to the lungs.

Floors might better be bare if one can afford smooth floors, although in these days of vacuum cleaners, carpet or filling can be laid over a bad floor and still be kept free from dust. Useless rugs laid about here and there for ornament are a nuisance. All vases that carry no message, have no memories, have no use, and are not particularly and especially beautiful, so giving pleasure and comfort to the soul, might better be thrown at once upon the junk pile along with useless draperies and other trash.

Go over your home carefully and see

Changeable Climate

IS A CONSTANT THREAT TO THE HEALTH OF THE PEOPLE.

Dr. Hartman, of Columbus, Ohio, discusses an important health topic.
He says:

Yes, it is the climate, not the germs,
that we have to fear in this country.
The germs are present, to be sure, and are of some significance in diagnosis. Climate, a changeable climate, is the true cause of disease.
The atmospheric pressure varies, the humidity of the atmosphere changes.
Every day the temperature rises and falls. All this presents to the body very great trials to adjust to.

The area of high pressure forms in the northwest. Moves rapidly southeast, subjecting millions of our population to its influence. The result is, thousands upon thousands of people catch cold. A small per cent.
of these thousands do not get well of this cold. It goes into pneumonia, or chronic catarrh, or bronchitis, or laryngitis, or pleurisy.

Now, what I am getting at is this.
These climatic changes are inevitable.
No one can prevent them. The very best we can do is to prepare for them, defend ourselves against them.
Good health is the best preventive.
The very best. Vigorous health, with excess vitality, this is Nature's own preventive and protection.

We do not all have this, however.
Some of us must have assistance.
The assistance that I use for myself, would recommend for my friends to use, my neighbors and my countrymen, is Peruna. Keep Peruna in the house.

If the children indicate they are catching cold, give them Peruna.
If the parents, the grandfather or grandmother, present these symptoms that are so well known which precede a cold, a few doses of Peruna and the deed is done.

Some people are very subject to colds. Others who have weak lungs and are timid about our winter weather, take Peruna off and on during the whole winter season.

The plan is a good one. The medicine is inexpensive. It does no possible harm to the system. It keeps the appetite regular and keen. It assists digestion and helps the user through the inclement weather of winter.

We have been selling this line of boots for both men and women for more than two years, and our sales have increased constantly during this time. They are good for everyone to wear who wants comfort and satisfaction, but they are especially good greatly benefited by wearing them. It can be truly said of them that when GROUND GRIPPERS go on, foot troubles go off.

We have a good stock on hand constantly for men and women. The price is $5.00, and they are as good or better than many so called medical shoes that cost a dollar or two more. Do they are imitated but never duplicated.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Mayor Oakley T. Curtis of Portland has announced that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor at the primaries in June.

The Maine Automobile association now has 2,677 members in good standing, a gain of 725 during the past year.

Caribou, Presque Isle and Fort Fairfield have gotten together and agreed to join Fourth of July celebration by rotation, beginning with Caribou this year.

The Axel Newton farm in East Madison has been sold to Burton E. Dunlap of Upper Caverhill, N. B. Mr. Dunlap will enter into dairying, having been a dairymen in his old home and proposes to establish one of the big best Ayshire farms in the State. He has already purchased several head of pure bred Ayshire stock and will bring with him many more from New Brunswick. This is one of the finest farms in the county, having every improvement that is found on a modern Maine farm.

The quarterly bulletin of the Maine State library again made its appearance Saturday and contains as usual material of great interest to its readers throughout the State. The issue contains the last of the list of genealogies begun in the April number, and states that those purchased since that list was made up will be published in the succeeding issues. In the issue the State librarian, Henry C. Prince, thanks the librarians of the Portland Public Library and of the Catter Memorial Library at Farmington for views of the library buildings, and expresses the hope that other librarians will take enough interest in the matter to assist the State librarian in completing the set. The quarterly also contains a number of articles of interest concerning the various libraries in the State.

Representatives from the English departments of the Maine colleges and neighboring preparatory schools met at the chemical hall, Colby college, Saturday morning, to form a new organization which is to supplement the other teachers' organizations and to work in harmony with them. The new organization will be known as "The Maine Council of Teachers of English." The purpose is "To promote acquaintance and good fellowship among the English teachers of the State; to conduct investigations; to publish findings; and to cooperate in every possible way with other similar organizations throughout the country." A constitution was adopted. Officers were elected as follows: President, Prof. Roland P. Gray, University of Maine; vice president, Prof. W. H. Harbison, Bates; secretary and treasurer, Prof. E. K. Masfield, Colby; editor, Prof. G. H. E. Hunt, Bowdoin. At 1 o'clock a recess was declared, during which the delegates were pleasantly entertained at luncheon at Fox hall, the guests of President Roberts.

The Hanger Chamber of Commerce through its fire prevention committee has sent a petition to Gov. Haines to designate an official State Fire Prevention Day. The committee suggests that April 22, the anniversary of the Hanger conflagration of 1911, as a fitting date. It also suggests that the day

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh is the only disease that has been cured by the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

error recommended its observance in schools, women's clubs, Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, and that many useful lessons can be drawn from Bangor's disastrous experience such as the necessity of metal window cases and wired glass, and the importance of removal of fire hazards from business centers.

Four big 40-ton portable stone crushing plants were purchased by the Maine Highway Commission at its meeting at Augusta, Thursday. These are of the very latest model and will be operated by 30-35 horse power engines. This equipment, with that already purchased by the commission, puts the State in a position to do road construction work in the best possible manner and at the lowest cost. The new equipment will be delivered immediately so as to be in readiness for use by the opening of spring. It was also announced Friday that an engineer from the U. S. office of public roads at Washington, D. C., is now at Augusta working with the State highway department on the plans for building the Federal Aid road between Portland and Bath. The government of the State has made a careful inspection of the highway and everything will be in readiness to begin work at the earliest possible moment.

The Province of Quebec has made an appropriation of $300,000 to build a highway from the city of Quebec to the Maine line, which will strike the State boundary near Jackman. This will be expended at the rate of $75,000 per year. Doubtless Maine will eventually build to connect with this road at the boundary.

Cyrus C. Babb, the chief engineer of the Maine state water storage commission, has long had a theory that the Maine water powers, instead of the Maine lumber, should be given the first place among the natural assets of the state, and he now feels that his recent studies and surveys have given him data to support this theory. He finds that for the seven years from 1905 to 1911 inclusive the annual lumbering operations resulted in an average of 1,000,000,000 feet board measure, valued at $10,500,000. He also finds that the total power developed by some 1,200 plants on the rivers and streams of Maine is now about 370,000 horsepower. The annual value of a horsepower has to be set at only $44 to make this water power worth as much each year as the output of the forests has averaged in the past decade.

Exports of canned goods from the United States during the year just closed approximated the $20,000,000 mark according to figures of the department of commerce made public Jan. 25. Meats, fruits, vegetables, dairy products and fish made up the principal articles of export. They were shipped to all parts of the world. Salmon, chiefly of Alaskan production, was the largest single item. Canned beef showed a marked falling off.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Augusta hospital the directors' report shows that 721 persons were admitted during the year as patients, an increase of 25 over the preceding year. Of these 101 were surgical cases, 139 medical and 181 eye, ear, nose and throat. Average number, 30; average number any one month, 36. Number of deaths, 39, or a little under 5 per cent. The report also shows that a large measure of charitable work was done during the year. The number of nurses graduated during the year was seven.

Figures on New York's yearly bill for butter, eggs and poultry have just been published and they have made some of the statisticians rub their eyes. For poultry alone New Yorkers paid $23,000,000 last year. More than 6000 carloads of fowl reached the city, or an average of about 115 cars each week. A curious fact is that a great part of this poultry arrived here alive, to be killed in the "kasher" establishments of the greatest Jewish community of the world. For eggs the citizens contributed a round $30,000,000, making a total payment for butter, eggs and poultry of $134,000,000. The public bill of the United States never reached as high a figure as this at any time during the Civil War. If out of this total the farmers got only 65 per cent. for their share, after deducting freight, cost of handling and middlemen's profit, then the country has still taken practically $60,000,000 from this city alone for these items. The amount of butter used in the city was enormous. Receipts for the year were 2,507,785 packages, or no less than 150,465,480 pounds, or 39 1-2 pounds for every man, woman and child in the city.

The Androscoggin County Holstein Breeders' Association at its annual meeting in Auburn, Thursday, elected J. H. Street, Webster, president; W. A. Waterman, Auburn, secretary-treasurer; P. M. Austin of Auburn, George B. Caville of Lewiston, G. P. Benner of Monmouth, James Vossius of Lisbon, Alonzo Conant of Turner, Chester E. Chipman of Poland and H. G. Dyer of Portland, vice presidents; J. H. Street, W. A. Waterman, Fred H. Chandler, Charles L. Palsifer and J. H. Blanchard, executive committee. At the afternoon session Dr. G. M. Twitchell of Auburn gave an address on Holstein breeding.

The horse is holding his own in the United States. Livestock estimates as of January 1, 1914, show that in the country there were on that date 20,062,000 horses as compared with 20,507,000 at the beginning of the previous year. Time was when automobile enthusiasts were predicting that the doom of the horse had been pronounced. Up to this time, the horse is still with us and as useful as ever. If the automobile has prevented any great increase in the number of horses in the country, it has not caused any marked decrease. It will be many years before it will be necessary to take the children to the upstart that they may see what a horse looked like.

George R. Hunsweil of South Auburn has already shipped more than $200,000 worth of furs to Paris this season. The first shipment was made last 10th when over $100,000 worth of choice skins were sent across the ocean to the French capital. A large portion of these furs are being shipped to St. Petersburg where they are largely purchased by the nobility. Quite recently he sent another invoice which included at least a dozen silver gray and black foxes. A family photograph was taken along with these choice and costly furs in which Mr. Hunsweil, wife and his daughter and little son all appear. In the group of furs were eight silver grays costing $2000 and a sea otter for which he paid $1200. In speaking to the Lewiston Journal of this big fur shipments Mr. Hunsweil says: "Our party from Paris has been here again and just left. We closed him out our entire collection, which was much larger than the first one, and the goods will be shipped on Saturday of this week direct to Paris. We have bought a great many more furs this season up to the present time than in any one year before. Through the depression which occurred through the month of December, owing to the continued warm weather and the unsettled conditions, we were as active and even more so than usual. We have nine furriers traveling men who cover New England, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Ontario, and in addition to these we have between 3000 and 4000 shippers who send us more or less furs each year. We also have an agent in Alaska, who gets us some nice sable, black foxes, sea otters, and other goods of this description."

The Panama Canal has reached such a condition of completion that a large ocean steamer could now pass through. Colonel George W. Goethals says there is thirty feet depth of water through the Culabra Cut and Cucaracha Bluffs and it is his intention to send a Panama Railroad steamer through the canal probably in April. A circular order issued by Colonel Goethals to go into effect on February 1, abolishes the Atlantic and Pacific divisions of the canal construction because of the completion of the work. H. C. Cole, the engineer in charge of the Pacific division, will resign on that day. Lieutenant Colonel William L. B. Hunt, of the United States Corps of Engineers, the concrete construction engineer at Gatun locks, also his engineering position, but retains his seat on the Panama Canal Commission. Both ends of the canal are practically completed, only the electrical installation and cleaning up remaining to be finished.

Potato production in the United States is small compared with certain other countries having a much smaller area and much less population. The product of Germany in 1911 was 1,263,000,000 bushels; Austria, 428,000,000; France, 421,000,000, and the United States, in the year in question, 289,000,000 bushels. The production of the United Kingdom, from which our chief importations are drawn, is considerably less than that of the United States, having been 231,000,000 bushels in 1911, of which 138,000,000 were produced in Ireland, 108,000,000 in England and 35,000,000 in Scotland. The farm value of the potato crop of the United States in 1913 is stated by the department of agriculture at $225,000,000, a larger total than that for any earlier year except 1911, which was $231,000,000. The United States crop of 1913 supplied an average of 3 1-2

WASHINGTON LETTER.

With the passing of Shelby Moore Cullom there is broken one of the very, very few remaining links that bind the present to the ante-bellum period of public life. He was a close friend of Lincoln when Lincoln was but a country lawyer in Springfield, Ill., and the friendships of boyhood held through the years that brought fame and high esteem to both the "Great Emancipator" and the man who began his political career as a city attorney in Springfield in 1855, coming to the House of Representatives in 1865 and continuing in public life until March of 1913, when he retired from the Senate of the United States with years and with honor to his credit.

Such a remarkable career, a long lifetime holding elective office of the highest public trust, is the highest testimonial of the trust and affection of the people; and that is not to be won save by deserving it.

No man in his generation—or rather of his three generations—had so wide an experience of public life as Shelby Moore Cullom and none knew more beautiful friendships and fewer enmities. And he died believing in the immortality of the soul.

A measure which, if passed by Congress and is signed by the President, will be of vital interest to the thousands of employees of the Bureau of Animal Industry scattered throughout the country, especially in meat packing centers or vicinity, is the bill which has been introduced by Representative S. O. Lohack of Nebraska, providing for a reclassification of the salaries of these employees. Those affected by the bill will be the veterinary inspectors, meat inspectors, inspectors assistants, stock examiners, skilled laborers and clerks employed by that big branch of Uncle Sam's government. Under it they will all receive higher salaries. The bill is before the Agricultural Committee of the House, and hearings upon it will be commenced within a short time. Members of Congress are being urged from all sections of the country, by friends of the employees, to work for the measure, as it is believed if the measure once reaches the floor of the House it will surely pass.

The most important building on a farm is the home and the most important room in the farm home is the kitchen. This is a conclusion reached by the experts in the Department of Agriculture, who have been charged with the duty of making a careful and conscientious study of farm life. "Investigations of prisons, insane asylums, and houses of correction seem to prove the fact," they say, "that the conditions which account for the existence of these institutions are often found in inadequate and unhappy farm homes. Better farm homes are needed. Pleasant and comfortable farm homes tend to build families together. But the cheerless, unlovely and insanitary houses drive boys and girls to the cities."

It is the judgment of the investigators of farm life that the average farm home has failed to share in the improvements that are every day being made on the farm.

Farm women of a century ago with their open fires and log houses were better off than is the farm woman of today, it is declared. No attention has been paid to comfort or economy of the farmer's wife's labor.

About 400,000 prairie dogs have been destroyed in the Cochetopa and Pike National Forests of Colorado and the Tusayan and Coconino forests of Arizona, according to a report recently made by the Biological Survey of the Agricultural Department.

It is estimated that the amount of forage that these rodents feed upon would be sufficient to feed about 15,500 sheep or about 1,800 cattle which would be valued at about $150,000. The cost of exterminating these pests of the prairies was about $12,000.

Last year the Biological Survey used 35,000 pounds of oats, 4,000 pounds of carbon bisulphide and about 1,500 ounces of strychnine in the Cochetopa Forests in the work of prairie dog destruction. "The agents of the Survey prepare the poison which is mixed with strychnine with a starch mullage of about the consistency used in starching linen and by applying this to the oats each kernel receives a film of poison starch."

No market for the hides of these prairie dogs has been found in view of the fact that American and English furriers secure better skins from Siberia for five cents apiece which are much better adapted to be worked into gloves than are the American hides.

bushels per capita, while that of 1912, the high record year in production, gave an average of 4 1-2 bushels per capita. The production of 1913, 338,000,000 bushels, was larger than in any other year except 1912, which showed a total of 421,000,000 bushels; 1910, 319,000,000; 1909, 317,000,000; and 1904, 333,000,000.

A good story is told of the childhood of a noted singer. As a little girl she went to stay with a lady who gave her the family portrait album to look at. She turned the leaves quickly, and in a few minutes closed the book.

"Don't you like it, my dear?" the lady asked.

"Yes, very much," said the little girl politely, adding, "We've got one at home, only the pictures are prettier."

OF GREAT USE IN BREAKING UP COLDS

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil is a Thing Long Desired

Every one knows the value of castor oil in breaking up fall and winter colds, but most people have found it too hard to take.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil does away with this only objection. It is pure, simple castor oil without taste or odor. Nothing is added; nothing good taken out.

In making castor oil tasteless, Spencer Kellogg & Sons of Buffalo have discovered a secret that had evaded chemists for 3000 years.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil works better than the old evil-tasting, gill-smelling kind. It operates pleasantly, without griping, and does not upset the stomach. Children take it easily.

Do not confuse Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil with prepared, mixed or flavored castor oils. It is the only true, pure, tasteless kind. Sold in all drug stores, not in bulk, but in 25c and 50c sizes. The public is protected by the trade mark—a green taster leaf, bearing the signature—Kellogg's.

Made only by Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., refiners of vegetable oils.

The new invention of Mr. Thos. French, which is being put on the market by the French, Latham and Harris Co., is meeting with great success and it would seem that a great future is in store for the promoters of this invention, as nothing has as yet been put on the market that could in any way equal it. The machine is so constructed that it regulates the thickness of the paper to the ten thousandths part of an inch and keeps it at the proper thickness all of the time. Any one that has not seen this invention and who is interested in machinery surely ought to call at Mr. French's machine shop and inspect his invention, as it cannot fail to be of interest.

SUNSHINE.

Merry sunshine, brightly gleaming O'er the white-robed, snowy earth, Frosty rocks, like crystals gleaming, Where precious gems have birth.

Gleaming through the stately firs, On the top of yonder mountain, Down to where the partridge whirs, By the frost-chained, sparkling fountain.

Gleaming o'er the silent woodland, To the stilly, frozen lake, Then upon Aztec's highlands Does the merry sunshine break.

Down into the valley creeping Where the woodman's axe doth ring, Through the pines and spruces peeping, Where the squirrel chirps and sings.

Down, down to the old homestead, In its quiet sheltered nook, With its quaint and mossy roof tree, And the frozen pond and brook.

Then up the range of mountains, Glancing over hill and plain, Down to Diamond's swift fountain, Pouncing between the rocky chain.

Blessed sunshine, merry sunshine, Shall not we, through life's dark way, Be best ever, with thy beams, 'Till we greet, eternal day.

POEMS WORTH READING

THE BRIGHT SIDE.
There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we only would stop to take it,
And many a tune from the better land,
If the querulous heart would wake it.
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er falters,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the wintry wind prevails.
Better to hope though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning,
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filigree,
And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snuff the delicate, slender threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit and grieve, and wonder.
—M. A. KIDDER.

IF.
(Somerville Journal.)
If all things were just what they seem,
If dross were really gold,
If milk were always rich with cream,
If women ne'er grew old,
If life were all a time of joy,
If pleasures never had alloy,
If lies need not be told,
If we were paid for having fun,
If wishes would come true,
If fate were kind to every one,
If we had autos, too,
If all our luck were always good,
If men were free from guile,
If people did just what they should,
If clothes would stay in style,
If maidens all were fair,
If humorists were always droll,
If we were each an heir,
If rent day didn't come around,
If airline steaks were free,
If turkeys cost ten cents a pound—
How happy we might be!

OUR NEWSPAPER TER HOME.
By William Cary Dineen.
Yes, I know how an old friend drops in,
And then,
Sister neighborly-like, for, ter say,
"Howdy-do."
Ter tell you how things is agoin' with him,
An' ask yer how ev'rythin's goin' with you;
Don't hev no per-ter-ter news, like enough,
Ter surprise yer clean outer yer boots; jest a call
Ter show yer he's takin' an int'rest in folks.
An' ain't a fergittin' a feller; that's all.

Wall, that's like our newspaper down ter the forks;
Sister happens along, come 'round Thursday night,
An' says she'll hev me my spectacles handy,
An' draw up a cheer fer me close ter the light.
An' fetch out her knittin' an' set down ter Helen.
So contented-like, reckon 't would please yer ter see Us ol' folks enjoyin' the ev'nin' so, gether,
Me readin' an' stand an' she list'nin' ter me.

The left a' the news ain't no con-querer much;
Jes' helps ter fill in, so's ter seem like they's more,
An' a powerful sight ther best part of the rest
Is deen's wa're already heered on before;
Goin' on that a feller's bin talkin' about
All week, like ex. nat. when he's driv in ter town;
Jes' looks in the paper ter see if they's there,
What they is that's left out an' what things is put down.

But say, come Sunday, "I wrap it up careful,
Ter send ter our boy in the city, ter read,
See it's deen's an' errand a' mornin', she says,
Not hixable the day, nor agin' my errand;
An' Jes' I write home to me, thankin' us fer it.

ACCURED PENSIONS.

The question of the disposal of the pension which may have accrued before a pensioner's death is interesting many of our correspondents. The following are the rules governing the Pension Bureau in the matter:
An accrued pension is payable, under the terms of the act of March 2, 1907, whether the certificate issues prior or subsequent to the death of the person entitled to the pension; first, to his widow; second, if there is no widow, to his child or children under 16 years of age; third, in case of a widow, to her minor children who are under 16 years of age at the date of her death.

No other person is entitled to receive the accrued pension, as a matter of right, nor is it considered a part of the assets of the estate of the deceased pensioner. It is not liable for the debts of the estate, in any case whatsoever, but inures to the sole and exclusive benefit of the widow or children.
The proof necessary to establish a claim for accrued pension is identical with that required to establish the claim of a widow or minor child to original pension, in so far as the relationship of the claimant for the accrued pension and the pensioner is concerned.

Full instructions will be given by the Commissioner of Pensions to an applicant for accrued pension as to the character of the evidence necessary to establish a claim.
As to reimbursement for the expenses of the last illness and burial, the Commissioner of Pensions directs: A claim for reimbursement may be made by the person who bore the expenses of the last sickness and burial of any pensioner who died leaving no widow or child under 16 years of age, provided the pensioner did not leave sufficient assets to meet such expenses. An application for reimbursement should be accompanied by the following evidence:
Bills of all expenses of last sickness and burial. If paid by the claimant for reimbursement the bills must be properly receipted to said claimant. If unpaid, the parties to whom said bills are due should note on each bill, over their signatures, that they hold the claimant responsible for the payment. If the bill be for medical treatment it must show the dates of visits or treatment and the charge for each. A bill for nursing and care must show the dates between which the services were rendered and the rate per day or week. The bill of the undertaker must be itemized and show the date on which the services were rendered. Each bill must show that the service was rendered for the pensioner on request of whom reimbursement is claimed.

All claims should be presented in the name of one person.
Bills which are forwarded become part of the records of the Bureau of Pensions and cannot be returned. Claimants should, therefore, secure duplicates of such bills if needed by them.
The pension certificate which was issued in the name of the pensioner, if such certificate is not in possession of the claimant a statement showing its whereabouts or final disposition should be made.

LINCOLN HIGHWAY.
A Coast-to-Coast Thoroughfare.

Plans to beautify the Lincoln Highway, making it attractive in appearance as well as useful, are now being considered by the officers of the association. It is proposed next spring on Arbor Day to have the children of the public and parochial schools plant trees along the side of the road. William Miller, professor of horticulture of the State University of Illinois, and Edward C. Humley, of the Interlaken School, Rolling Prairie, Ind., have both endorsed the project.
During six years of residence in Germany the advantage of their system of growing trees along public highways interested me," says Prof. Humley. "The State of Baden collects from $250,000 to $400,000 annually from the fruit of these trees and they also add greatly to the attractiveness of the highways. It should be possible to create further interest in the Lincoln Highway by inducing the schools of the country, adjacent to the highway, to set aside a day next spring on which their children could plant trees. This would be an invaluable lesson in school work, as well as a contribution to the highway."

Napoleon Lajoie, of the Cleveland American league club, is among recent contributors to the $100,000 fund of the Lincoln Highway Association.
Frank X. Mudd, chairman of the Run and Tons committee of the Chicago Automobile club, announces to members of that organization that a tour of the club will start about June 1, 1914, to the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco over the Lincoln Highway. The specific date will be announced later. Mr. Mudd declares that many hundred members have already announced their intention of making the trip by automobile with their families, and with the route thoroughly marked and great stretches improved the difficulty or delay is expected in making the journey on a seven to ten day schedule.

Support for the Lincoln Highway has been voluntarily offered by many hundred automobile and civic organizations, the last indorsement being made by the Commercial club of Grand Junction, Iowa. Resolutions were adopted as follows:
"Whereas the Lincoln Highway Association have undertaken to construct a permanent highway across our country from coast to coast and that we consider this effort worthy of support and commendation of every individual and organization within the borders of our modern civilization.
"Therefore be it Resolved, that we heartily commend the Lincoln Highway Association for its efforts in the development of such a magnificent piece of work, that we congratulate said association on their persistence and care in the location of the highway and that we tender the said association the most and financial support of the Grand Junction commercial club in keeping with their ability to contribute."

Studying our human nature, This, among other things, we learn, That the things that don't concern us Give us oft the most concern.

Sick Women
Made WellReliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

CAMDEN, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. TELLIE WATERS, 1155 Knight St., Camden, N.J.

And this one from Mrs. Haddock:

UTICA, OKLA.—"I was weak and nervous, not able to do my work and scarcely able to be on my feet. I had backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, trouble with my bowels, and inflammation. Since taking the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am better than I have been for twenty years. I think it is a wonderful medicine and I have recommended it to others."—Mrs. MARY ANN HADDOCK, Utica, Oklahoma.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman continue to suffer without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ailments. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

MAINE METHODS WIN SECOND NATIONAL EGG LAYING CONTEST—FEEDING FOR EGG PRODUCTION.

Director Chas. D. Woods of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station has given out the following report of Maine's triumph in the second national egg laying contest:

In connection with the second national egg laying contest carried out by Director T. E. Quisenberry at the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station a 12 months test was made during the past year of different methods of feeding for egg production. In the fall of 1912 10 pens of pullets were selected for this test. The birds in these pens were as uniform a lot as it is possible to select. The methods of housing were the same in all cases. The only variable factor was the different methods of feed used in the different cases. Five of the pens were Single Comb White Leghorns and five were Buff Orpingtons. The 10 different methods of feeding used and the results obtained are shown in the following table:

Pen	Eggs
61—Fed according to Maine method.	1598
62—Fed according to New York method.	1322
63—Fed with Norwiche feeders.	1310
64—Fed and confined to house continuously.	1495
65—Fed according to Canadian method.	1480
66—Feed kept before them at all times.	1403
67—Fed simple farmer's ration.	1402
68—Fed according to Haylor method.	1339
69—Fed according to any egg farm method.	1318
70—Fed according to Connecticut method.	1232

It will be seen from these figures that the method designated as the "Maine method" was over all the others, the birds in this pen laying 70 more eggs in the year, or more than a half dozen eggs per bird on the average than for any of the other feeding methods. The "Maine method" here referred to is the method of feeding which was first worked out by the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station and described in its bulletins. The method has been used for a number of years with excellent results on the Station's own flock of Barred Plymouth Rocks and it has been very widely used by poultrymen, not only in this country but all over the world, with satisfactory results. It is a matter of satisfaction, however, that this method should take a leading position when subjected to exact comparative test, as in this laying contest.

A brief description of the way this winning pen of birds in the second national egg laying contest was fed is given below.

The feed of all adult birds, whether pullets or not, consists of three essential parts: (a) the whole or cracked grains scattered in the litter, (b) the mixture of dry ground grains which has come to be generally known as a dry mash, and (c) green food. The component parts of the ration and the methods of feeding them will be considered separately. In addition to the grains and dry mash, oyster shell, dry cracked bone, grit, and charcoal are kept in slatted troughs, and are accessible at all times. Plenty of clean water is furnished. About five pounds of clover hay cut into one-half inch lengths is fed daily to each 100 birds in the breeding pens during the breeding season. When the wheat, oats and cracked corn are given, the birds are always ready and anxious for them, and they scratch in the litter for the very last kernel before going to the trough where an abundance of feed is in store.

Taking first the dry grains, the following may be said in regard to the method in which they are fed: Early in the morning for each 100 birds four quarts of whole or cracked corn is scattered on the litter, which is six to eight inches deep on the floor. This is not mixed into the litter, for the straw is dry and light and enough of the grain is hidden so the birds commence scratching for it almost immediately. At 11 o'clock they are fed in the same way, two quarts of wheat and two quarts of oats. This is all of the regular feeding that is done.

THE PINE TREE STATE.

In a return of the total valuation of the cities, towns and plantations of Maine, just made by the State Board of Assessors to the governor and council, there appears an interesting basis of comparison, not only with its own record of a year ago, but with its immediate neighbors of this section. The showing is quite a satisfactory one. It indicates a healthy growth and a definite increase in property of over thirteen millions. This is not based upon a revaluation of old possessions but upon an addition of new ones. An analysis shows some significant changes in the character of such property. For instance, there is a gain of nearly a million in the value of live stock and this in spite of the fact that sheep have decreased to the extent of nearly thirteen thousand, and cows about three thousand, though there has been a decided gain in the number of cattle. This may mean that the recent movement, already referred to, toward raising cattle for beef has already made some practical progress. Like the other States of this section Maine appears to be heading toward the extinction of the sheep-raising industry, which is unfortunate, especially as the State has unsurpassed opportunities for making it profitable.

One of the wealthiest and most populous sections of the country is New England and virtually half its area is included in the State of Maine. But the present inventory of its possessions suggests the extent to which it is still undeveloped. Its total valuation is a trifle over four hundred and thirty million. Of course, such figures must be accepted with caution because the basis of assessment varies so much between States that it fails to afford ground for a just measure of comparison. Upon the face of the figures the valuation of the whole State is only a little more than a quarter of the city of Boston. The total valuation of her twenty cities, which has advanced nearly six millions during the past twelve months, is $103,302,771, or considerably less than twice that of the town of Brookline.

The report, studied by one unfamiliar with the history and progress of Maine, would hardly convey to his mind the idea that it was one of the older States or one of the older settlements. A part of it refers to instructions given by the board by the Legislature with respect to "the exploration of wild lands during the years 1913 and 1914." "Exploration" seems like a somewhat vague enterprise to set on foot in one of our New England States, but evidently there is reason for it. Two members of the board, with its secretary, spent sixteen days travelling by canoe and on foot from Northeast Carry on Moosehead Lake to Fort Kent on the St. John River, ascending in this time Allegash and Priestly mountains, where by the use of glasses a very large area of country could be observed. In this manner much first-hand knowledge of a general character was ascertained, to be used in conjunction with the more specific work done by the explorers, who spent practically the whole season in this territory.

This seems like the exploitation of new and primitive territory and in a sense that is what it is. The boundaries are known, but the character of much of the country included is still an unexplored story. Maine is one of the most beautiful States in the Union, with a splendid climate, and when she fills up, when her vacant land is occupied, she will be one of the great States, in more senses than one.

BROWN-TAIL MOTH.

How to Destroy It and Save Parasites In Question.

People all over the State are making inquiries as to the proper method of handling brown-tail moths, and these inquiries are for the most part coming from people who in removing them have discovered that they are already filled with little flies—which are the parasites now destroying the pest. These people have found out that the question of how to destroy the nests without injuring the parasite is a serious one, for often before removing the nests there is no way of knowing that the little fly has made his home in the same.

It has been discovered by many people that upon removing the nests the little flies are present in great numbers. They are brought out by sunlight; in stormy or cloudy weather they stay shut up in the nests. There in the nests they are feeding upon the pest. The State department of agriculture, under the direction of which the moth extermination work is being successfully carried on, expresses the hope that all interested in the extermination of this pest will acquaint themselves with the nature of the parasites so that none will be destroyed through ignorance of the habits of these beneficial insects.

Major E. E. Philbrook, who is in charge of the moth extermination work in the State under the department of agriculture, states that instead of burning the nests, the best way is to place the nests in a barrel and smear the inside of the barrel with tanglefoot for three or four inches from the top. As the caterpillar emerges it will be caught in the tanglefoot, and as its vitality will have been so much reduced by the parasite feeding upon it, it will be unable to escape. The parasite, however, will emerge from the nest and fly away. As the work of this parasite in its first winter nest is only a part of its mission in the world, people handling brown-tail moth nests cannot take too much care that these parasites may not be destroyed.

AN ODD OCCUPATION.

Man Makes a Living Buying Worms Out of Rugs from the Dentists.

"There is at least one man in New York who makes his living by buying worn-out rugs from dental offices," said a New York dentist the other day. "I never heard of a business of this nature until last month, although I have been in the dentistry 20 years. But last month a friend of mine dropped in while I was examining the rug in my operating room. It was looking pretty shabby, I found, and I was figuring what kind of a new rug I'd get. 'I'll have to throw this old rug away,' I said to my friend. 'Throw it away? What will you do that for? Why don't you sell it?' he asked.

"Sell it?" said I. "There's no one who would give me anything for that worn-out old rug." "I'll send you a man who'll buy it pretty quick," was the reply. "I thought my friend was joking, but next day a man arrived first thing in the morning. 'Where's that rug you wanted to sell?' he inquired. 'I showed him. He pulled out a magnifying glass right away and got down on his hands and knees. He started at one corner of the rug and worked inch by inch over the whole surface, scrutinizing it with the most intense care.

"I saw immediately what he was after. He was estimating the value of the minute particles of gold and platinum which had fallen on the rug in the form of dust from the hands of the dentist standing by the operating chair grinding various bits of work so as to make them a perfect fit. I would not have supposed this dust to be sufficient to be commercially considered, but I was wrong. 'How much do you want for the rug?' he asked. 'I thought I would try a straight shot, without having any idea of the value, and so I said 'Oh, $50, I should think.' 'To my surprise the rug trader did not express indignation. He merely said that was too high. We did some negotiating, and finally he gave me $53 and took the rug. I thought that was the easiest money I ever got for a rug, intended to have the old rug thrown on the dump pile.

"I found later that this man does a good business by buying dilapidated rugs from dentists. He cuts the rugs into small squares and turns them in a machine, which catches the gold and platinum dust."—New York Times.

LOOK AFTER THE COMBS.

It is well to have an eye to the combs of the birds in cold weather. A slight frosting, coupled with the mischievous attentions of the other birds, may start bleeding, and loss of vitality results at a time when condition should be of the best. A slight loss of blood, I have found, often so affects a bird that it will be found to tremble violently in case of extremely cold weather. It loses appetite, and ambition to take the exercise that would enable it to better withstand the cold. The affected member yields more readily to later attacks, with increasingly disastrous results. If neglected, the unfortunate bird not infrequently dies. At best, egg production is stopped, or retarded if a female, while if a male, its vigor is likely to be so impaired as greatly to lessen its value as a breeder. Such ill consequences may be easily avoided by a little prompt attention. Common wheat flour is excellent to stop the flow of blood from any but deep abrasions. I always keep a quantity of this in a warm place, in a box with perforated top like a pepper-shaker. When I find a bird with bleeding comb, I grab it up, "pepper" liberally with flour, and place it by itself, preferably in warm quarters. At the end of the day, sometimes in a few hours, the bird may usually be returned with safety to the company of its mates, after removing all traces of the flour with a soft, dry rag.

While it is the single comb in general that causes most trouble of this sort, the thicker rose or double combs are by no means immune. The tiny spikes on top of these frost readily, especially the combs of the males. Then a slight irritation gives them the appearance of a piece of bloody meat, and they are attacked by the quick-eyed females accordingly. The show quality of a bird may soon be ruined in this way, or even more serious damage done, as the males, strangely enough, rarely offer any objections to the pernicious attentions, but seem rather to enjoy the continued picking.

Frozen wattles, while rarely given to bleeding, are, nevertheless, a prolific source of trouble. They will often be frozen in comparatively warm quarters, owing to the bird setting them in to the drinking water just before going to roost. The affected specimen (naturally a male) minds the injury much more than he would a damaged top-piece, for the swollen parts soon become so sore as to bother him about picking up food. If the victim be exposed to continued cold, the wattles will swell to enormous size; sometimes until the enfeebled bird is unable to raise them from the floor. Even at this stage, a cure may be effected by transferring the patient to warm quarters, even though for a time it may be necessary to force soft food down the throat. But earlier treatment is infinitely better.

Been a Safe as Well as Effective Medicine.

It is needless to suffer. Don't be sick. It is not natural. Build up your blood by taking the old reliable Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is perfectly pure, clean and absolutely safe, as well as of peculiar and unequalled medicinal merit.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been and still is the people's medicine because of its reliable character and its wonderful success in the treatment of the common diseases and ailments—scrofula, catarrh, rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, general debility. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies and enriches the blood, and in so doing renders the human system the greatest service possible. It has been tested for years. Get Hood's, and get it now from any drug store.

LOCAL HISTORY.

the appearance in every respect and more easier for the horse to move about. His Portland place of manufacture was upon the easterly side of Congress, a little above Center street in a three story wooden building.

His brother, Charles P. Kimball, was a man of different build in every respect. He engaged in politics, and wanted to be Governor of the State, and in the year of 1871, received the Democratic party nomination. He was a good speaker, somewhat bombastic but was not, while in motion, appearance or conversation like his brother James M.

He was shorter, stouter with a less attractive manner. He was defeated at the polls but came to the front the next year. The vote stood:

1871—Whole number,	105,897
Stimley Peabody, Rep.,	58,285
Charles P. Kimball, Dem.,	47,582
Scattering,	34
1872—Whole number,	127,566
Stimley Peabody, Rep.,	71,585
Charles P. Kimball, Dem.,	55,943
Scattering,	35

The result of the contest finished up his aspirations for political office holding and finished his business career in Portland. He had planned to build a fine residence at the corner of State and Congress streets in Portland but his political expenses were so heavy he abandoned the project. He went to Chicago, Ill., where he engaged in the same kind of business he followed here and died, it is reported, a very rich man. His wife was a descendant of Gov. Wm. King's father, the first Chief Executive of Maine. He has a tall monument in the Portland Evergreen cemetery.

His first place of manufacture was on Preble street, close up to the Preble House; his second, in the large three story brick building, he built, corner of Commercial and Elm streets which went to Zeas Thompson, and Fred H. his brother, sons of Rev. Zeas Thompson, the first clergyman of the Universalist denomination in Bethel.

A hobby in carriage work by Charles P. was what was termed a "fancy seat," a seat that folded itself partly up back of the leader where a couple of children could be seated, and when raised and extended back made an additional seat for two adults.

LOOSE DRAYS.

The people of Bethel who knew anything from personal observation about vehicles answering to the above name must be very scarce, for they went out of use about the time of the great change in construction of pleasure carriages. They were best killers. A drawing and print of one would serve as a far better illustration than I can here present by the use of words. They were about eighteen feet long from "stem to stern," and very simple in construction. Two wide planks, three inches thick were used. From the rear part of the horse around to his fore shoulders, the planks were fastened somewhat with the body of the creature, then from the rear of the creature to the rear end of the plank, the planks were sawed to about nine inches in width. One pair of wheels were used, very closely constructed, about thirty inches in diameter. To the axle of these wheels the timbers, arms, all or by whatever else the two pieces of heavy hardwood were known, was bolted, in the middle. About every foot, a two inch sugar cane was made, the whole length of the timbers, two stakes fitted, in front of which a black six or seven inches square, with a leather strap attached, with a nail at each end of the strap through which a stake might be passed, then into the sugar cane. This arrangement held the load from sliding off at the rear, the leather held the block in place. The driver sat, when not walking which he usually did, upon the left hand timber, his feet resting upon a rope, when not in use in holding the load in place, that passed entirely from the rear of the horse to the axles. One, two and three horses were used the efficiency was controlled by reins, but when one or two horses were added they were trained to obey by words from the driver, and it was surprising, and wonderful to observe how intelligently the beasts would respond to words.

The horse was attached by the aid of rings attached to the horse collar, through which the ends of the shafts passed and then a pin used; a chain passing over a heavy back-saddle, hooked in a well greased staple a foot wide in each shaft; a prop or round shaped wood being used to hold up the shafts when the vehicle was not in use, attached to the rear shaft by a piece of leather nailed to each, letting one end fall to the ground when used as a prop.

All this was when "ram and molasses" was much in evidence and barrels and hogheads were much in use. One of these horse killers if now put on exhibition would be a drawing card.

I have the more style of vehicles I ought to describe before returning to the palmy days of Orange C. Frost in Portland and the great fire that destroyed the American House with which he was largely associated in a business manner. I refer to the Vermont farm market sleigh that used to come down through the "Notch," West Bethel and then on various ways to Portland, the introduction of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad changing the mode of travel, traffic and manner of living but to do so now would make my contribution to this issue of the Citizen too long.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Events of Interest From the Seat of Government.

By J. E. Jones.

Alaska Rediscovered.

The most important thing ever done in reference to Alaska since the United States purchased it for a song, was the passage by the Senate of the bill providing for a railroad in that country. The House of Representatives will undoubtedly concur in the Senate measure, which will give to that great region a railroad one thousand miles long. The road in itself is important, but the fact that the United States has declared that it proposes to back the Alaskan proposition to the extent of $10,000,000 means more than simply a streak of rust, screeching locomotives, and freight cars, traveling through a barren waste. In short the isolating of Alaska is to be brought to an end, and an aggressive policy to develop the great resources is to be carried out—great storehouses of wealth are to be opened. The general impression is that Alaska is a fertile region, whereas the mean annual temperature of Alaska is about the same as that of Washington, D. C. Likewise it is learned that Alaska has numerous deep ice-flocked, ice-free harbors; and the coast line is 26,000 miles long, while there are six thousand miles of navigable rivers in the country. Of course, portions of Alaska are extremely cold, but it is a region of great variety. The sixty-five thousand people of that country have certainly showed their patience, and now that the government has joined the boosters club there will doubtless be a great movement toward that rich region.

In the Hands of the Lawyers.

Some of the best lawyers of the country are engaged in setting up the plan for the new anti-trust legislation. There have been numerous conferences of the leaders for the purpose of agreeing upon a program that will have the solid support of the Democratic party. Of the twenty-three members of the two committees in the House and Senate that will direct this legislation all but Senator Smith of South Carolina are lawyers.

"Putting on the Dog."

The social season is on in Washington at the White House, and the new Democrats who have come to the capital in consequence of the victory of their party have been splendid customers of the merchant tailors and hat-makers, who have rigged them up in spike tails, top coats, and elevated hats. A good many of the newcomers betray their self-consciousness, and they are making a fine struggle to play the game according to the rules, and in a manner that may lead outsiders to believe that they might have always been accustomed to this sort of thing.

They're Still Changing The Inaugural Date.

Shortly after George Washington became president the suggestion arose that the inauguration should be changed from March to January, or to April or May, or some other old date. Senator Shafroth of Colorado is the latest don Quixote to attack the inaugural timetable, and he feels that political taglines and bad weather would be jointly eliminated by cutting out the extra short session of Congress and having the president come into office on the first day of the year.

Working the Stock Exchange.

Some of the Democratic leaders are in real earnest in their desires to put the screws on stock exchange methods. A measure has been introduced in Congress by Senator Owen, which

Child Labor to be Barred From Commerce.

After many years of efforts to secure more rigid restrictions with reference to child labor, and in conformity to a public demand that children be saved from the great mass of the factories, Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania proposes to bar from interstate commerce the output of any plant employing children under fourteen years of age, or which works children under sixteen years of age more than eight hours a day. Representative Palmer is floor leader of the House, and holds a place of peculiar importance in the lower body of Congress. He is a Member of that body because he prefers it to a place in the President's Cabinet, which was offered him at the beginning of the Wilson administration. At the time of the declaration of the portfolio it became known that Mr. Palmer's heritage of the Quaker beliefs and customs had, in his own opinion, disqualified him for management of the instruments of warfare. So far as is known he is the original and only living Democrat to decline as great a place in the government. But the same kindly instinct that caused him to turn aside from the natural path of advancement and ambition because of an inherent interest in humanity, is found in this child labor bill. It is no doubt drastic legislation; and goes farther than the provisions of the Keeney bill, which has attracted attention in the Senate. The measure goes before Congress with the unanimous endorsement of the Child Labor Committee of the House. Its friends had in it the merit of effectiveness; and with Palmer, one of the strongest men in Congress, taking the lead, it is reasonable to anticipate concrete results, in spite of the opposition that such a bill is sure to encounter.

Springs of Arcadia.

What those people in the Forest Service do not know is hardly worth looking into. There are a great many of us people who have traveled along river routes and across hot sands, who have an idea that only in Jerusalem could one find arcadia, and our knowledge of the tree in those parts inclined to the belief that it thrived principally in springs. Shattered must be all of those fond and cherished beliefs, since Uncle Sam's men, who are posted, tell us that there are about 450 species of arcadia, 300 of which are Australian species, and the rest scattered over the world, principally in Asia, Africa and America. In California it has been demonstrated that the arcadia is well adapted to the reclamation of drifting sand and dunes. This has been demonstrated on the California seacoast, clear down to the ocean beach, directly exposed to heavy gales and dense fog. In Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, the arcadia has been used in making a magnificent forest of a waste of drifting sand. The principal use of the tree has been in tan bark, and all of the leading tan bark arcadia come from Australia. The arcadia timber is beautifully grained from contact with the ground. The larger trees grow more than 100 feet high, with a trunk clear of branches for fifty or sixty feet, and a diameter of from two to four feet. Those which are most used for commercial products, and particularly for tanning, do not need to attain large size or great age before the products are merchantable.

Will Not Annihilate the Democracy.

Now "the daughter of Mark Hanan" has brought her foot down in that same emphatic way as did her illustrious father when underlinates did not walk the chalk line. Mrs. McCormick is the chairman of the Congressional Committee of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, and she has made her position most emphatic by declaring as an authorized the statement of the younger suffragettes, who because they were displeased with the action of one of the committees of Congress threatened to bring the forces of Suffragists everywhere into play to help encompass the defeat of the Democrats. In the language of Mrs. McCormick this statement is "perfectly foolish." Mrs. McCormick says that the young ladies who have brought forth this idea have done so because "it is simply a desire to be spectacular." The suffragist lobby—for it is nothing else, is said to have devised one of the most systematic campaigns ever set in motion to carry on a political program in Washington.

NORWAY.

A number of friends called on Mrs. Talbot Mundy, Friday evening to congratulate her on being a successful exhibitor with her paintings which were recently hung in the Pennsylvania Academy of Arts. Refreshments were carried by the guests and the evening was a very enjoyable one. Mrs. Mundy is now working on a portrait sketch of George Howe the naturalist.

The men of the Congregational Church met Tuesday evening at E. N. Sweet's store to make arrangements for the supper which will be held at the Orange Hall, Wednesday, Feb. 25. It will be followed by an entertainment, "Miss Prim's Kindergarten."

M. L. Kimball, Esq., who received his commission last week as Income Tax Agent received orders to report in Boston.

The Sunday school class of the Congregational Church met at Miss Mabel Kuehnland's, Wednesday evening. The gathering was in the nature of a surprise to Mrs. Mary Kuehnland. The ladies carried food in covered dishes and there was much merriment when the dishes were uncovered and the refreshments spread.

The contest which has been on at Stone's drug store for the past week closed Saturday night. Mrs. Fred Harrison and Miss Marion Gibson were tied for honors. The prize was five pound box of chocolates. The three pound box went to Miss Eva Har-
